DECLAWING

Despite their thousands of years of association, man has not succeeded in debasing the cat—nor does the cat seem to have been much more successful in ennobling man in general, you and I to the contrary.

It is this characteristic perhaps more than any other—the ability of the man and the cat to abide in equality and not in lordship and subservience—that has made the cat the respected friend of so many of us.

It has been difficult to reconcile this concept with the practice of spaying and neutering. Yet in the doctrine of the greater good most of us have done so.

Now a similar issue has been raised in the declawing of cats—in the right of humans to violate in yet another way the physical integrity of our associate.

Cats' editorial position has been opposition to the use of this operation. Aside from its possible effect on the operatee, removal of a cat's claws seems almost symbolic of the aim of so much of today's "betterment" activities—the attempt to turn life into a series of powder-puff experiences.

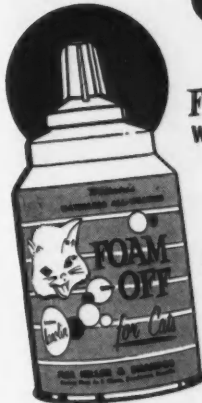

Many a child has had its first lesson in respect for others from the harmless but momentarily painful swipe of a badgered puss—many a grown bully has similarly learned that littleness need not mean helplessness.

Let's not unthinkingly follow the precept that because man has the power to change any particular thing to his immediate benefit it should automatically be used.

Perhaps there are conditions where declawing is desirable. But we suggest that if one takes the long view of each individual case the answer will almost always be No.

The Readers Always Write

PARADE DRILL

Dear Editors:

I plan to surprise my husband with his own subscription to CATS Magazine as a gift. He is a retired army man and no one will enjoy his retirement as much as our solid White Manx, Stumpy.

She has made five round trips to California from Tennessee and last year made the trip to Germany and back. She hated every minute of it.

Thanks for many hours of delightful reading.

Polly Guile

Box 55

Watertown, Tenn.

COMPLIMENTARY COMPLAINT

Dear Editors:

Your magazine is simply priceless. I enjoy every page of it. The Question Box is very helpful. I've only had my pets for four years as I had always lived in nurses' residences. Never again will I live where I can't have a cat.

Why not advertise CATS Magazine in some Canadian periodical. We haven't a cats magazine here and I found out about your publication just by chance.

I think many people here would subscribe if they just knew about it.

ADOPTION CENTER

Dear Editors:

I read with great interest and sympathy of the struggles of the local animal shelters and have long been interested in the problems which these institutions face. Namely, uniting nice pets with nice owners.

Lately, I have had the experience of finding homes through newspaper ads for kittens of our cats which we carelessly allowed to mate. Far from being the grim experience we expected, I found that the ad brought several charming people who were interested animal lovers who just called because they had been advertising or wanted a special type cat.

I had more fun and was delivered from my daily routine and boredom with calls and discussion from prospective owners and others who had adjustment problems and wanted to talk to another cat owner.

It occurred to me that perhaps it would be possible to run a cat-adoption agency—(supply and desire) . . . with the middle man making both parties happy.

In this way, people who could not afford ads or weren't home to receive calls could be aided by willing persons who could act as mediators.

They could give advice on training and general health problems. The voluntary contributions could serve to help people with cats who could not afford altering and spaying when desired.

It could be worked out, saving both the cats, the new owners and the shelters a great deal of trouble. This plan could be adopted over an unlimited area. Anyone interested, do get in touch with me. My husband backs me in this idea.

TAKES GETTING USED TO

Dear Editors:

This renewal makes me a four-year member and take it from me, CATS is better than ever before and I wouldn't change it one bit. To find my copy in the mailbox is the nicest surprise of the month. Both my husband and I like the two-year binders and are amazed at their low cost.

I think it would be nice to honor the picture of the month by using it on the cover. Also would enjoy a "pen-pal page." While I'm wishing, I'd also like the magazine to have about forty pages every month.

Thought I'd tuck in a picture of two good friends. My kitten, Squeaky and Yankee, a six-month-old German Shepherd. The odd part of their friendship is that the older and bigger Yankee gets, the more Squeaky loves him. When he was small, she would have nothing to do with him.

SWAP

Dear Editors:

As a cat lover, I look forward each month for my issue of your magazine. Even Miss Belinda, a four-year old Siamese has her day with the magazine and usually ends up with a few tears before I can put it away. But who am I to argue with a Siamese cat.

It is a wonderful magazine and I love the articles and photographs. I wonder if any of your readers might come to my rescue—via the picture method. I am doing over the den in my apartment and as you have likely guessed—in cat-motif. I have a good selection of my own cat and friends' cats, but I need more. I was wondering if someone would want to add to my collection. I would be most grateful and Miss Belinda promises to answer every donation with a picture of herself.

GLENDALE GLOOM

Dear Editors:

I have read and enjoyed your fine magazine for many months and find it a great source of information.

We have four nice cats—two Siamese and one Domestic Shorthair and a Persian. My husband and I are avid cat lovers and get quite a kick out of our little furry friends but once in a while we read something about cats that gets us boiling mad. For example that new ordinance in Glendale, California, allowing only three cats to a family.

How can anyone think so badly of our friends who give so much pleasure and ask so little in return. St. Francis taught us to love all feathered and furry creatures but I guess there are people who love only themselves.

PRAISE BE . . .

Dear Editors:

The June issue of our favorite magazine is charming as usual. I especially loved Fifty Felines and am wondering how one could manage. I spend so much time on door-duty and various other slave labor with only four. Thomas and his hiccupps was very clever and amusing.

As always, Blanche Wolfram's article was most informative. We have only had one case of ear mites to date and certainly hope not to have any further infestation. As we often say, we would scarcely dare have a cat if we were not sure of our wonderful veterinarian to count upon.

UNDER- GROUND Ltd.

by Katherine U. Calmar

Ramp and vestibule painted, lawn in place.

Gabe suns himself at tunnel exit in patio.

"I'm back—What's for dinner?"

John said when he came in to work, "are both your white cats in?" And I said, "Why, yes, I think so." And he said, "You'd better look to be sure." And that was how we found that Bun-Bun was dead—killed on the road in the middle of the country. With acres on which to roam, he must try for the greener pasture on the other side of the road, with his life as forfeit.

Champy, our other white cat was older and wiser and somehow had learned the dangers of the road, but not Bun. So we buried him under an old apple tree near the barn, John our helper, Tom my husband, and I, and then the utter needlessness of the whole thing struck. Here was Bun, young, beautiful, with the whole world before him, gone, dead, and for what reason? There's a reason for everything I kept repeating to myself, but I couldn't believe it and I didn't see it.

As shock wore off, grief took its place. I mourned his great innocent blue eyes—his beautiful long white coat, his enormous tail in which he took such pride.

He was always around. I couldn't make a bed, smooth a chair or get dinner that he wasn't lovably in the way. "Why, why, why," I asked? Could there be some possible explanation for this apparently senseless death, some use to which it could be put, something to be gained from it?

When Tom came home from the office a few days later he informed me that he had contracted for a little Shaded Silver Longhair, too young to be taken from her mother but to be ready in about four weeks. "We'll train her," he said, "not to go near the road."

With scorn I rejected the whole idea.

FEWLINES 'BOUT FELINES

THE TEN-MONTH-OLD

Her tiny quadruplets were fast asleep
In the dark cupboard under the pantry shelf
And, finding herself with nothing to do,
She suddenly longed to be babied herself.

She'd lulled them to sleep with her instinct to purr,
Having fed them, and washed them from head to toe;
Their round, little bodies were sleek and full;
They'd no need for her for an hour or so.

Yawning and stretching, she tiptoed away,
Happily thinking of such former pleasures
As lights, voices, laps and the scratching of ears
Before she was blessed with these pests. Her treasures!

She paused at the door, ears twitching to hear.
What was that sound? A "mew-mew" then another!
Sighing, reluctant, she turned and went back
For first things come first—and she was a mother.

—Nonnie Darrow

NOW I REMEMBER

Eyes gazing off
So dreamy and wide
Tell me, dear puss
Why do they chide?

Have I forgotten
Your saucer of milk,
Your ribbon of red,
Your cushion of silk?

Ah no, all these things
Are plainly in view.
Then what could have caused
Remonstrance from you?

But now I remember
What was not done
Your good morning pat,
My soft, silken one.

—Dorothy Miller

A FARM PROBLEM

Country cats
Have sins that other
Cats don't know.
From a country mother
They learn where
The mint is found,
Julep-scented
Prowl around
In the catnip patch.
They reel and stagger,
Drunk as lords
They rise and swagger.
They rule the place,
These country cats,
These catnip-nipping
Autocrats.

CATS CREEP IN

*Cats creep in where "angels fear to tread";
They stick their little noses in your tears.
They always have their kittens in your bed
Or in your box of most-prized souvenirs.
They crowd you from your place before the fire,
Or curl up hairily within your lap.
What haloed angel ever dare aspire
To things like these and not invite a slap?*

*They scratch and climb your front door screen at dawn,
Or yowl at midnight in the nearest trees.
When you investigate they're always gone.
What angel ever dare try things like these?
But they give brightness, warmth and love each day:
An angel's wings are cold and far away.*

Enola Chamberlin

PUSS IN BED

*Twist and turn or cough and sneeze,
Flail your shoulders, flex your knees,
Hump your back and toss your head—
Puss will never leave your bed.
Clinging dauntlessly to you
Just as if her fur were glue,
Brash, determined, snug and warm,
Blithely riding out the storm,
Puss, while blankets wave and sweep,
Yawns and nods and falls asleep!*

—Georgette Weiser

THE WAY OF A CAT

When first I saw you at my door,
A homeless kitten, starved and poor,
Your eyes were very scared and wide—
You hardly dared to come inside.
But afterward when you had dined,
You grew quite happily resigned;
Much like a child you sought my lap
And snuggled down to take a nap.
Time passed and you became quite gay
And played and romped the livelong day.
But all too quickly you outgrew
The spool and string I gave to you,
And went on weird, nocturnal jaunts—
Dark alleys were your favorite haunts.

And now that you are worldly-wise,
You sit aloof with half-closed eyes,
And scarcely ever pay much heed
To me, except in time of need.
And then you softly purr and raise
Your eyes to mine in pleading gaze
For plates of cream and bits of meat,
(I fear, at times, you show deceit),
Some say you are a hypocrite,
I love you though, in spite of it.

—Margaret E. Bruner
In the anthology, The Cat in Verse,
Pub. by Little, Brown & Co., Boston

CAPTIVE

On cushioned feet he moves across the floor,
Then stops to toss a scrap of paper high
Until it flutters gayly—soar-dip-soar—
As if it were a teasing butterfly.
But soon he tires of this breath-taking fun
And sits close by the parakeet's bright cage
To stare at that sweet tidbit in the sun
As cats will do no matter what their age.
Then, bored, he bats the fringe on Grandpa's chair;
Decides to try its comfort for awhile,
And as he rests soft purring fills the air;
Then dreams soon wreathes his face with kitten smile. . . .
Oh, tight-curved, furry ball of loveliness,
You hold my heart a captive, I confess.

—Bertha Hudelson

LAND OF THE GOOD KITTIES

by Nat McKelvey

There is a land where the good kitties go, when they leave this world of men.

There is grass there, green as emeralds, lush and soft as the down of geese. There are tall trees, always leafy, casting cool shade where the kitties may lie when they grow tired of romping in the gentle sunshine. There are hedges, and vines, and flowers, and clean white sand where kitties may dig as they are prone to do.

In this land, there are ever running fountains of milk and springs of cool, clear water which never run dry. A snack bar is perpetually filled with such dainties as kitties love—kidney and liver, salmon, and pure ground beef.

In this land, too, there is night, for all good kitties are creatures of the night, wrapping its mysteries around them like a protecting mantle. In the night, they leap and play, chasing feathers or swiping mightily at imaginary fire-flies. But the night, in the land of good kitties, is only for their pleasure so it is not perpetual, as in the land of the dead. It is followed by the brilliant day, which has its delights, too.

A leaping stream, filled with flashing trout, surges through this land, and the trout are safe, for this is the realm of good kitties, gentle and kind, who wish no harm to any living thing.

The trees are filled with birds of many colors, and they are safe, too. They sing to the good kitties of brotherhood and love, and they counsel them:

"Do not grieve, good kitties," they sing. "For in this land you will see the ones you love. They come to you each day. They will come to place gentle, loving hands on you, to caress you, to tell you that all is well and that nothing, not even death, can change or destroy the love between you." So sing the birds and the good kitties hear and know it is true.

To this land of good kitties comes one who is known to those who love him as Sandy. He is big and wise, not proud or aloof, but truly regal, loving all who will love him. His eyes are bright and clear as he sets one white fore-paw tentatively on the edge of the grass carpet that marks the boundary of this warm, new land. His shiny, red coat glistens as the long hairs catch the bright sunshine, sending it flying away in a shower of golden sparks. His head is high, his full, plume-like tail erect. His freckled nose quivers a moment as he tests the air. Then, with confidence, he walks quickly forward, hearing the message of the birds and believing it.

As Sandy enters the land of the good kitties, he is no longer old and broken, no longer thin and weak. He is, instead, robust, strong and full of playful zest. Coming to meet him are old friends. There is Chiflado and Mike, Pinto and Tuppy and Felix. And at the end of the welcoming band, happy but pulling back with accustomed diffidence, is Goldie, Goldie of the Roman nose, Goldie who, when he lived in the world of men, put his trust in Sandy, his leader, his protector.

Though shy, it is Goldie who first touches noses with his old friend.

"I am so glad to see you, Sandy," he says. "You will be happy in this beautiful land. And you must not grieve, for it is as the birds say, a place where you meet your loved ones from the world of men. Every day you meet them, and they talk to you, and caress you. The miracle of it I do not understand, but it is true."

"I believe," says Sandy, his eyes, as always, filled with wisdom. "When they come, I will run to them, sit in their laps, caress them with my head and lay my paw against their cheeks. It will be as it was on the other side. They will come. I know they will come."

Slowly, he turns his magnificent head in the direction from which he has just traveled, his eyes bright with faith.

"They will come, because they have promised."

Escorted by Chiflado and Mike, Pinto, Tuppy and Felix, with Goldie brushing his shoulder, big Sandy moves slowly through the tall grass toward the shade of the great eucalyptus tree, there to claim his right to eternal peace.

Sandy, right, and his friend Tuppy. Both are now in the Land of Good Kitties.—Photo by the author

JENNA FIRST DSH TOP SECTIONAL

Another mile-stone in All-American history was set this season when RM Qd. Gr. Ch. Ramayana Jenna of Gray Horse Farm, out-scored all other Southern cats to become that section's candidate for Cat of the Year. "Jenna" is an exquisite Silver Tabby Domestic Shorthair female, owned by Mrs. Whitney D. Abt of Burton, Texas—and she is the first Domestic Shorthair ever to have gained this top Sectional honor.

Following her by the closest of margins is the famous Blue Longhair who was the South's top-scorer in 1955 and the great 1957 Cat of the Year, Mrs. Merald E. Hoag's Gr. Ch. Sir Gai of Nor-Mont, from Rockville, Md. He is now eligible to try for O.S. Cat of the Year in the All-American competition.

"Sir Gai" is one of eleven Southern winners scored by Mrs. Hoag—an all-time Sectional record. Mrs. Abt has a full quota of eight, closely followed by Lynne Vanderpoel with six. Four awards each go to Mr. and Mrs. Jack M. Barts, Maud R. Barney, Ouida Blacknall, Sally M. Kisler, Mrs. Merle Lawson, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Learn, Helen Mueller, and Mrs. Richard O'Donovan. There are two triple winners, sixteen doubles.

Highest-scoring Longhair female is Longhill's Tres Chic of Flagstone, and top Shorthair male is Qd. Ch. Bult'h Hex. O.S. Domestic is Ch. Libertee, high Manx Gr. Ch. Miamanx Sir-Hops-A-Lot of Fur-Fun, O.S. Manx Patience.

Four of this year's Southern cats are former winners of CATS Magazine's Kitten awards: Ch. Lynwood Darla, Ch. Sheromar's Enchantment, Ch. Nor-Mont Karen, and Qd. Ch. Bult'h Hex.

Three awards go to cats who gained their first All-Southern ribbons in 1952: Christmas Cotton Bear, Gr. Ch. Nor-Mont's Charm, and Db. Ch. Floridanus Tangelo. Longhill's Tres Chic of Flagstone, Flagstone's Play Girl (1955 OSCY), and Tr. Gr. Ch. Chirn Sa-hai Ricki all started in 1954. Four of this year's awards go to 1955 novices, eighteen to 1956, and twenty-three to 1957.

Cat ownership and show attendance continues to grow in the South. This season 565 cats and kittens were exhibited—many of them from two to ten times—and 154 awards are being given. This compares with 526 and 145 a year ago. In 1956-57 there were twelve shows in the South; last year there were fifteen: 8 ACFA, 5 CFA, 2 ACA.

CARESS (B.P.) CONQUERS EAST

Leading the list of All-Eastern Award winners for 1958 is Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Yindling Caresse of Cymri, beautiful Blue Point Siamese Female owned by Lillian Pedulla of Wilmington. She will compete for Cat of the Year recognition, to be announced next month, against the highest-scoring cats of the three other CATS Magazine geographical divisions.

Gaining second place, Best Longhair, and Best O.S. Eastern Cat honors in this twelfth annual All-Eastern competition is M.: and Mrs. Robert Green's magnificent Black Male, Gr. Ch. Vel-Vene's Voodoo, of Cedar Grove, N. J.

Once again a healthy increase has been recorded all down the line in number of cats exhibited, number of awards, and number of shows in the East. This year, 473 individual cats of Eastern ownership were exhibited, most of them many times—44 more than in 1956-57. Awards climbed from 121 to 131, and seventeen shows—one more than last season—were held: 8 CFA, 4 ACA, 3 CFF, and 2 ACFA.

Highest-scoring Longhair Female is Db. Ch. Gallahad's Faith, while Shorthair Male honors go to Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. Cymri Cyro. Qd. Gr. Ch. Mrs. Kelly of An-Si is top Manx, and Best Domestic Shorthair is Qd. Ch. Jaynar's Tinker Belle.

Six Canadian cats—the highest number ever—gained Eastern awards. Little Delaware with eleven winners, and Rhode Island with three, were strong per capita winners over the larger states, their scores being: Connecticut 11, Massachusetts 10, New Jersey 22, New York 34, and Pennsylvania 32.

The historical record shows Tr. Gr. Ch. Casa Contenta Caprice and Ch. Ginger of Weequahic scoring their first wins in 1953. Qd. Gr. Ch. Mrs. Kelly of An-Si, Lady III, and Benmost Bore Sheila gained Eastern recognition in 1954, with Gr. & Tr. Ch. Citrus Ridge Eo of Esperance and Gr. & Tr. Ch. Yindling Caresse of Cymri joining them in 1955. Gr. & Qd. Ch. Silver Rock's Bit of Honey was A-S that same season. Seventeen of this year's winners first won in 1956, and eighteen in 1957.

Leading in number of wins are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Martinke and Mrs. Ralph E. Crone, both earning six awards. Five each go to Lillian E. Pedulla, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Schuler, and Edith Heatherly; four to Appleman and Gleeson. Three owners tie with three each, twenty with two.

Full listing of all winners and advertisements honoring many of them begin on page 20.

The 1958-59 show program already shaping up in the East provides for the finest opportunities ever offered exhibitors and spectators. Capping this year of advance, an even greater season is in store for all the Eastern Cat Fancy.

THE EYES OF YOUR CAT

PART II

Eye problems can begin early in the life of a kitten for there are times when the eyelids will fail to open for the first time, or one will open and the other may open partly or remain closed. Usually the lids will part themselves between the seventh and ninth day. If they do not open by the tenth day, you should begin the task of opening them yourself. As we mentioned before, the Meibomian glands are supposed to secrete a fluid which prevents the lids from sticking together. It is entirely possible they have not begun to function properly and may need some help. To open the eyelids you thoroughly boil some water to make it sterile, and when it cools somewhat it will be ready for use. Dip some soft cotton in the warm water and gently massage the eyes with the wet cotton. Doing this for about ten or fifteen minutes should release the lids. Sometimes, gentle pressure in parting them is advisable. If, they are still unable to open it would be well to take the kitten to a veterinarian and let him find out what the trouble is. Even after the eyes have been opened it is possible for them to stick together again. Simply repeat the warm water massage whenever you notice they are remaining closed. It may take a few days of constant care but they will in all probability remain in good working order once they have been opened.

Keep a close watch on the eyes of your kittens at all times for if pus should be noticed it is an indication that an infection has set in and medication must be used to clear it up at once. It may be that trichiasis, entropion, ectropion or conjunctivitis is the causative factor. That can be determined by your veterinarian. There are many ophthalmic ointments on the market which he has access to. Some contain sulphas, some antibiotics or combinations of them while others may have one or more of the steroids added. Which is the better is a matter of opinion. However, if there is not a severe inflammation with redness of the lids, it is not necessary to use the ointments containing steroids for they may only add to the inflammation. Neopolycin (Pitman-Moore) or Myciguent (Upjohn) have been used with good success. The eyes should first be washed with sterile water and then a small amount of the medication should be squeezed from the tube directly onto the eye (about one-eighth inch of the material for kittens and a quarter-inch for adult cats). The medication comes in small tubes with a small opening in the nozzle and is very easy to use. The eyelids are then closed and very gently massaged to insure the spreading of the medication over the entire eye and into the corners. If this is done three times a day, the eyes will clear up and serious damage may be averted.

It had been believed for many years that kittens with eye trouble of this nature should be destroyed. Today however, the wonders of medical science has made it possible to save as high as ninety-nine per cent of these cases. Kittens can be helped or cured and go on to live a normal and a happy life. There is little danger of this condition spreading to other kittens if you begin the treatment early. However, you must be observant and be on the lookout for trouble. If the eyes are not opened in the kittens it does not take much pus to injure the eye. Ulcerative keratitis may be a direct result.

In adult cats, conjunctivitis appears to be the most prevalent disease of the eyes. This can be helped simply by following the same procedure as mentioned before in respect to kittens. There are many occasions when dirt will collect in the corner of the eye. Although the cat will try to clean this, it cannot get at the dirt very easily. If you will just take a piece of cotton dipped in water you can very easily remove it. Sometimes fur may become lodged on the surface of the eye. To remove this just spread open the eyelids with your thumb and finger of one hand while the other hand using a piece of clean soft cloth, will sort of sweep across the eye thereby picking up the fur and removing it. Dirt and fur if not removed can set up a painful irritation and the eyes will water in an attempt to wash it away.

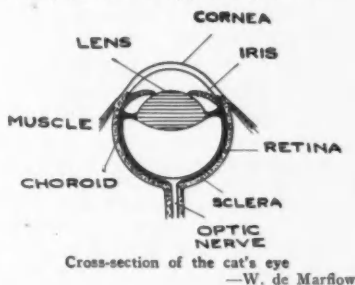

We now come to the hereditary condition that is infinitely more serious. As we all know, the quest for shorter noses on the Persians sometimes leads to extremes. It is my belief that when the nose of the cat becomes too short, the lacrimal bone in the skull is deformed and creates an obstruction in the nasolacrimal duct which prevents the drainage of the fluids from the eye. There is no place then for the fluid to go except over the lids and down the face. This is not a very pretty sight and some cats must have the tears wiped away five or six times a day. Then too, because the fluid is protein in nature, it can be a breeding ground for bacteria or viruses. When it deteriorates it causes the fur to die where it runs, sometimes permanently. I sometimes wonder if it is worth all this trouble to maintain a standard which is so detrimental to the cat. Would it not be better to permit the nose to be a little longer so that this unfavorable condition can be eradicated and cats once more return to their clean-looking beauty.

I have been asked if it is possible to tell if a cat is blind? Well, your veterinarian with the aid of his ophthalmoscope can determine a partial blindness in the interior of the eye but if the eye has not been diseased or injured it is more difficult. Perhaps the best way to determine blindness is to cover one eye leaving the other open. Unknown to the cat, quickly pass your hand before the other eye. If, the cat blinks that eye it is a sure indication that it has the use of its sight in that eye. Then reverse the procedure with the other eye.

If, your cat has lost an eye in battle or through an injury it may be possible to have a glass eye made to match the remaining eye. Or, you might make a patch to cover the socket that will remain from an eye that has been lost. This will help eliminate chances of infection and would look rather Madison Avenueish.

From this article, you have learned something of the duties of various parts of the eye, how to determine if an infection is apparent, how to treat minor diseases, and the importance of an early consultation with your veterinarian. It takes so very little of your valuable time to care for your cat properly and to see to it that it is not in needless pain or discomfort. I know your cat cannot thank you in so many words for the kindness you have shown it but there are other ways it has of expressing its appreciation to you. It will show an increased affection by wanting to be near you, it will rub against you and will purr more loudly in your presence. It will once again be carefree and gay and will bring to you many moments of entertainment. Why not show your love and affection to your pet by caring for its many wants whenever they arise—you will be happier if you do.

Cats Question Box

Conducted By E. A. Renaux, D.V.M.

My eight-month-old Siamese female is sweet and lovable about sixty percent of the time, but the other forty, beware! She takes wild fits—racing madly about, her tail huge as a bush. At these times she will bite if you attempt to pick her up. We had hoped having her spayed would quiet her. If anything, she is worse. Is this typical of the breed or do you suspect there may be something wrong with her?

—Louise A. Powers

42 Erna Court, Upper Darby, Pa.

My experience has taught me that this type of behavior is perfectly normal for some individuals. Why they do it I have no answer but most times after such actions they will become what we expect them to be, quiet and cute.

My Siamese (five months old) has a slight hunched back. It has been that way since he first started to walk. My veterinarian has checked for worms but has never found any nor any other reason for this condition and says it is just a habit the cat has formed. He runs, plays and shows signs of being happy and healthy. Do you have any ideas on this?

—J. R. Strishack

491 Maplewood, Struthers, Ohio

Some cats will have a more pronounced arching of the back than others and it appears to have no ill effect on them. There may be some spinal problem that is the cause of it but the situation should not be one to cause alarm.

I just lost two shorthairs who were nineteen and twenty. They both had the same symptoms—loss of appetite and inability to drink. The clinic could only find bad teeth as the cause. I have one eighteen-year-old left and since she has started to lose weight, I'm afraid she will go like the other two. Could you tell me anything to do to save her?

—Mrs. Nora Stamps

P. O. Box 733, Earle, Arkansas

I would feel that you were very fortunate in having the cats as long as you did. More than anything else I would suspect that you would be dealing with a condition for which there is no cure; the effects of old age. Food supplement and judicious use of some hormone preparations may be of value.

Our cat is going on thirteen and weighs seventeen pounds. He acts quite normal but for the past several months seems to have developed an unhealthy thirst. Can't seem to get enough water. Won't this affect his kidneys? We take him to the veterinarian twice a year for teeth cleaning but would like to have your opinion on this, too.

—Mrs. Thelma Weaver

RD #1, McKean, Pa.

A variety of conditions may produce this symptom—heart trouble, kidney trouble, diabetes—to name a few. It would be best to have him checked to try and locate the difficulty, if any, and attempt to alleviate it.

Ever since kittenhood, our now two-year-old Siamese male has had a peculiar eye condition. When he eats, his eyes stream tears. At other times his eyes are normal, although on occasion, they are red rimmed and swollen, then return to normal. Do you have any diagnosis?

—Mrs. R. R. Mills, Jr.

4102 Wensworth Road, Baltimore 7, Md.

The tear duct that leads from the corner of the eye to the nasal passageway may not allow the normal secretions of the eye to drain properly and this would cause his eyes to water and become swollen. An examination could reveal this and proper treatment should help.

MAUDE L. ERWIN FOUNDATION FOR CATS

P.O. Box 66

Chula Vista

California

To the Readers of CATS:

In the May, 1958, issue of CATS magazine appeared a letter from Ted Brinks of the SAN DIEGO HUMANE SOCIETY relative to the MAUDE L. ERWIN CAT FOUNDATION.

We submit this letter with the hope that it will be of interest to the readers who have followed the story of the Foundation.

Mrs. Erwin, the founder of the Foundation is deceased, leaving the guidance of the Foundation in the hands of a small group of people determined, however, to protect and care for the animals which have come to be their charge.

The Foundation is now engaged in defending itself against the attempt of its larger and wealthier opponent, the California Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Inc., to oust the Foundation from the property which Mrs. Erwin had for years made available to and dedicated to the Foundation for the care of the animals. This action by the CSPA, if successful, could be completely disastrous to the Foundation.

As Ted Brinks of the HUMANE SOCIETY reported in the May issue, "the cats . . . are being well cared for" and the "organization needs financial assistance badly." The Foundation also needs moral support against those who for selfish reasons would deprive these animals of the help and care that Mrs. Erwin intended they should receive.

Very truly yours,
June Granger,

President

Maude L. Erwin Foundation for Cats

(Cost of this space donated by a friend of the Foundation)

WHY CFA? Some will say because it is the leader in the cat fanciers world . . . others because it carries the prestige that only a good close working group, with half a century of experience behind them, can. Equally good reasons—but we imagine that members of our eighty-six affiliated clubs could give us hundreds more.

ON SMOKE BREEDING

This morning a Smoke kit was born. Not an unusual occurrence, but to me it climaxes a pet theory that I have hoarded for the past five years—that of Smoke breeding out of whites.

Traitor though I be to the East coast, I have long admired the massiveness of the California Smoke, with its nice broad head and full light ruff. It is very easy to line-breed Smokes or breed Smoke to Smoke in a selective manner, which is all we have been doing in the past. We have been fortunate in thus having Kitty Kaper capture 1956 All-Eastern honors of Best Male Smoke, Best Female Smoke, and honorable mention Smoke. However, we admit freely that our Smokes, (except for the daddy who is out of California stock) do not have the massive body which is the breed's trademark.

There have been some excellent Smokes appearing at the East coast Shows, which I understand are out of Silvers. This would appear to be the logical breeding, yet using Silvers would be mixing wrong eye color, plus the possibility of Tabby markings which is a Standard fault in a Smoke.

I would like to credit the breeders who first started me thinking in terms of starting over with a White. Miss Lucy Clingan, Kerry Lu Cattery California, bred our males daddy, Ch. Kerry Lu's Darkies Darling of Dunkeorn. "Darling" is now owned by Mrs. Helen Koerner of Long Island. Our boy, Tpl. Ch. Blossom Time's Inquisitive One, was bred out of a Blue dam, Solomon's Blossom Time, owned by Mrs. Janet Combes, also of Long Island.

These three, unknowingly sent me searching for a White queen, with good copper eye color, BUT a White bred mostly out of Blues. I found her at the Toronto Show, Canadian National Exhibition last August 1957. Her litter brother, a Blue, won over our own Blue kitten entry.

Kanada of Kitty Kaper was bred to our Smoke stud. I would like to have a penny for every time I was told what a mixture I would get from such a breeding. A mixture I got, too. Four different colored kits in the same litter, but each color true to its Standards. "Kandy" presented us with five babies—two Whites, one Blue, one Black (a good solid jet black) and my precious Smoke. And the "Powers that be" were good. My Smoke is a little girl.

I shall not write further of future results, as the Smoke is a rare entry at the Eastern shows, and I do not wish to bore the majority. I would, however, be most happy to correspond with other Smoke breeders who might be interested. Contacts can be made from Kitty Kaper Kattery, 339 Hawthorne St., Hatboro, M. R., Pa.

AROUND THE CONTINENT

The statue-like little Abyssinian is Nehasset's Ruby Hadana O'Aurora whose beautifully-decorated cage won a prize for her owner Vivian Chartier in Reno last year. Below, Judge Betty Groell who officiated at the Montreal Cat Fanciers' Longhair Specialty holds the ribbons for Margaret Lovett's Casa Contenta Caprice who was Best Cat in both shows.

Val's Dolly Varden of St. Cyr makes a pretty picture for her photographer-owner G. Evelyn Metcalfe. This little Blue Cream was Best in T&T and Best Cat at Stockton February 1-2. ### "ARABIA" A-M BURMESE FEMALE

We deeply regret a transposition of awards for All-Midwestern Burmese female as shown on page 27 of the July CATS. The correct awards are as follows:

Burmese Female—Gr. Ch. HRH Marin Arabia of New Moon [of Tap-Toe] (MHM 57), Lydia E. Dzbanski; Hon. Men.—KonKeReeBaka (AM, AHM 57), Mrs. A. Slauter. Our sincere apologies to the cats and to their owners.

DECLAWING—FOR AND AGAINST

Robert Barbarash's letter on cat declawing in the June CATS brought such a large response from our readers that we can not print it all. We are however using the following excerpts from several letters received to present a cross-section of views.

HOW I DID IT

I let the cats set the pace. At first they were openly suspicious of the baby. Once during the hand-waving stage, one of them scratched her, so I kept them off the bed when she was there. Now all avoid her crib (except when she isn't in it!) and all avoid her now that she's toddling except for Butchie, a patient, long-suffering male (neutered, as are all our cats). Butch lets her grab and pull at him a bit while I stand by giving lessons on how to pet pussie. "Gently, Honey, gently!" (with appropriate gestures).

She is not allowed to disturb them when they're eating or using their pans, and I discourage her attempts to annoy them while they are napping. I've also provided more out-of-the-way retreats for them. I intend to continue to be referee until my baby knows how to handle an animal. Children and animals do belong together, but only when the child is old enough to know how to treat them.

Ruth C. Gagnon

85 Van Reyepen St.
Jersey City, N. J.

PROFESSIONAL APPROVAL

Mr. Barbarash lost, quite needlessly, two friends. Not only was his information regarding the "inhumaneness" of declawing incorrect, but the position of most veterinarians is just the opposite.

I first had the surgical technic described to me by Dr. Wayne Rise who is one of the country's outstanding veterinarians and the winner of a Humane Award. In the past four to five years I, as have other veterinarians in our area, performed the surgery on hundreds of selected cases.

By selected, we mean that we will not perform the operation on a complete Tom or on a mature cat that has complete freedom and is likely to be a fighter. We do recommend that cats be declawed at the time of spaying or neutering (it cuts the cost of surgery, since the one anesthesia and hospitalization will provide for both operations).

We suggest its use where cats are likely to be (or already are) destructive to furniture or may accidentally scratch humans.

I personally have four cats that have been declawed and I can testify that they are happier since they have complete freedom both indoors (on furniture, tables, beds, etc.) and outdoors. They can still climb a tree with their hind claws which are not disturbed; they can scratch themselves (when it itches) and they still catch an occasional mouse, squirrel, or bird (to our pain and sorrow).

I do not pretend to speak for all veterinarians, but I'm sure that if any cat lover will call the secretary of his local Veterinary Association, it will be possible to get the services of a competent practitioner who will humanely perform this humane service.

Robert R. Shomer, V.M.D.

1680 Teaneck Road
Teaneck, N. J.

TEACH THEM, THAT'S ALL

There's no need for such drastic measures as declawing. A cat's claws can easily be clipped. A pair of clippers for just such a purpose can be purchased for as little as $1.00.

I went through the same experience myself. I had a one-year-old daughter when we got Tommie as a kitten. My daughter was the one who had to be taught how to play with Tommie, not vice versa. When Tommie was too much of a gentleman to let her know she wasn't playing fair, I'd let her know. My daughter got scratched a few times, but she soon learned how to play, and they both got along famously.

When family and friends heard we were going to have a new baby they said, "Naturally you'll be getting rid of Tommie now. You certainly can't have a cat with a new baby."

We not only kept Tommie, but also took in Luckie who would have had to be given to the Humane Society if she had not found a home. The new baby, another daughter, has also been taught how to play with the cats. I notice I have to come to Tommie's and Luckie's rescue, not my daughters'.

Cats use their claws only as a last resort, and if they are clipped they can do little damage. As a matter of fact, I seldom even bother to clip them, and I definitely would not recommend even that for an outdoor cat.

HOW ABOUT HUMAN DECLAWING?

The Golden Rule applies to cats. So, we would ask the Bayside misguided man, if his wife scratched him, would he say she should have her fingernails "declawed."

Cats and people, kittens and children, do get along, but humans tolerating both should see to it that the association is on common sense grounds.

We doubt that any SPCA office would lack giving good advice or would condemn to death any cat for what the Long Island gentleman mistakenly regards as a "crime by a cat"—using what the Maker gave him as he deems and sees necessary and fitting. This is not to condemn the children, but they, like animals, need direction and guidance.

In our book every animal doctor who refused to "declaw" cats on the ground that to do so would be inhumane was true to his calling and Christian principles. Had we their names, we would cite each and every one of them.

Truman T. Pierson, President
Allied Cat Lovers International Inc.
5747 Nicollet Ave.
Minneapolis 19, Minnesota.

YES, and NO

It is plain to see that the child was scratched because she got too rough with the cats, and their only means of defense being their claws, they had to use them...after all, nothing, human or animal, is going to "take" mistreatment when it has a means of defending itself.

We all have to pay for our mistakes, and the child should have been taught right then and there that if she hurts something, or someone, she's going to have to be paid back. A scratch or two at this time would have taught her a life-long object lesson.

My Veterinarian frowns upon declawing, but if I were in a position wherein I had to either be without cats for pets or have them declawed, I'd probably go to another vet who would do it.

UNDERGROUND (from page 5)

"How," I asked him, are you going to train a kitten to keep away from an 1800-foot footage of road? You train her at one spot, and she'll go ten feet up the pasture and try there. No, I won't have half a cat, ever, unless we arrange some way of keeping her safe.

A vague, and utterly mad idea had been simmering in the back of my mind and this seemed a likely time to broach it. Although seemingly impractical it had one strong element to recommend it—SAFETY!

"What about a large covered cage made of chicken wire set at the end of our lawn back of the kitchen, with a little runway of wire for the eighty feet from it to the kitchen wall? There's a sort of trap door effect that I've read of some place and that could be installed in the outside wall, so that the cat could come and go at will, have room to play in the outdoors, but never never get out to get hurt."

All Tom said was, "No trap door, it could slam on her neck or back and injure her; we'll have to find something else," and we were immediately in the throes of how best it could be done.

No architects we, it was agreed that the first thing to be started should be the pen itself, which in our case turned out to be 30 feet by 30 feet. A trench about one foot deep was dug along the perimeter which would allow the wire screening to be set well below ground level and turned out from the cage; this to protect the cats from any animals trying to dig from the outside in, or any cat from the inside out. Posts were set every 8 to 10 feet along the outside edge and every 8 to 10 feet in the interior of the cage to help support the wire roof. 2x2's were nailed from post to post to keep the wire roof from sagging. Two doors at opposite ends of the enclosure made it handy to get in and out of the cage. These gates were simply fashioned of old boards and wire and were locked with a hook and eye. Because of the large expanse of our cage we used chicken wire, which is very satisfactory unless the kitten is small, in which case, she can pop right through. The remedy here is to fatten her quickly!

Then came the stunner. We would not have an overground run-way which would spoil the looks of the lawn, be a hazard for everybody, require constant trimming and collect papers and leaves, we would have a tunnel! This was the inspiration of my husband, who is most generally right.

Like the fabled cats of Kilkenny, we "fit and we fought" over that one. I insisted that it was impractical, much more of a job and probably terribly expensive. He countered in the surety of his maleness that if necessary we could make it of second hand lumber. The cats could be trained to use it. "I'm counting on my knowledge of cat psychology," said he smugly. It wouldn't be much harder to do than the overland type of run-way which required a lot more in the way of engineering than I, in my female ignorance, could appreciate.

I bowed, for the moment, to his superior knowledge, and the plans went on though I swore to check prices the next morning and confound him with the astronomical expense of drain pipe which we had tentatively decided to use, if we had a tunnel. From these two major points, we would fill in details as we came to them.

I called every lumber yard hereabouts trying to locate the contraption which would allow a cat to go in and out without harm to himself. All had heard of it, but couldn't tell me where I might locate such a thing. I finally found it advertised in CATS magazine. It is called a "Cat Exit" and consists of a frame in which is inserted what looks for all the world, like a large paint brush of black nylon. This keeps out cold and when the cat pokes her head through, the strands are soft and absolutely harmless. This contraption comes equipped with little doors so that the aperture may be closed off completely if necessary. "Now all we have to do is to cut a hole in the outside wall," I told John triumphantly, while he was digging the trench for the cage. "That's simple, I assume!"

The weather was hot and progress slow and we hadn't solved the tunnel problem. I was still holding out for an overground passage; Tom adamant in spite of the findings that drain pipe was out of the question financially. "We are not going to wreck our back lawn," was all he would say.

John had completed the cage and the issue still was unsolved when one night, Tom came home jubilant. He had discovered chimney flue tile which was 12 inches square and which, when treated with waterglass could be made impervious to moisture. This was a lot less expensive—it comes in 2-foot lengths making it easy to handle and by cementing the joints we had our tunnel. I gave up the argument, as John laid out the tunnel bed and plans were formed for getting the cat from inside the kitchen into Tom's precious tunnel.

During the following weekend, my husband and John broke through the kitchen wall, installed the "Cat Exit" and built a small enclosed platform 3x2x2 on the outside wall of the house to which the ramp would attach.

The roof of the enclosure was partially made of glass (any old window pane will do) to allow light to seep into the tunnel, and the boxed in ramp descending at roughly a 45-degree angle had little wooden cross strips every six inches to assure the cat foothold.

The bottom of the ramp was fitted to and cemented onto the chimney tile tunnel which had been already laid with the far end extending and opening into the cat cage. All John now had to do was fill in his ditch, and all we had to do was to get our cat, and get her to use this architectural and engineering triumph.

At this point Tom got stage fright. Would she use it? Was he right about his "cat psychology" after all? For on the strength of his positive assurance that any cat, worthy of the name, would delight in the entire arrangement, we had decided not only to purchase the little Shaded Silver Girl, but to go cat wild and buy a pair of Orange-Eyed White Longhair kittens and in time breed them.

The "Bun-Bun Memorial Tunnel" as we dubbed it, was about ready for the ribbon-cutting ceremony when little "Charm" was brought home. She was the original kitten we had bought and "Gabriel" a white Persian boy was to follow in a few weeks.

Charm was not impressed with the tunnel at all. She could be induced, after a few days to poke her head through the soft brush part and a gentle push from the rear would boost her onto the outside platform where she would stay for about one minute and then back into the kitchen. We carried her out to the cage and tried to coax her through the mouth of the tunnel by calling her favorite word "supper!" Still no luck and Tom was really worried. But the problem was solved automatically one day when Champy, the older cat, decided to go exploring and Charm just had to chase that big bushy tail through the exit and down the ramp. The outside world looked awfully big to her and the sky enormous when she finally put her head out and being a little frightened by the immensity of it all, her first trip was a short one. But both Tom's "psychology" and the cat's curiosity got to working and before long she was disappearing regularly to explore the outer reaches of space.

By the time Gabriel arrived, she had the pen thoroughly cased and her aplomb was superb as she gaily whisked through the brush curtain showing "Gabe" how very smart she was. He too was hesitant at first but the sight of a fuzzy tail slowly being withdrawn through a brush curtain proved a lure too strong for any kitten to resist. And so he gave chase and found his outside world, safe and yet quite free, death-thwarting and still fun-giving, a place where kits can romp, and cats can sun and no trouble accrue—even the birds are protected.

And as we watch Charm and Gabriel scampering in and out, we feel that perhaps here is something good which came from Bun-Bun's untimely death. It forced us to solve the problem in a manner which would be easy for the cats and easy for us. Yes, it took work and some money but we have the satisfaction of knowing that our kittens and our kittens' kittens, will be safe.

The Back Fence . . .

Your vacation all over? Still looking forward to that beautiful morn when you wave goodbye to routine? Made arrangements for your cat's (or cats') welfare while you holiday away from home?

Kansas City is lucky to have a local kitty-sitter of some renown living there. Mrs. F. X. Ritchie is an authentic watcher-of-cats-while-owners-are-away.

It first happened when a friend was leaving for a trip East and was uneasy about leaving her two cats at the veterinarian's. Mrs. Ritchie moved into her friend's apartment and being an old hand with cats, not only solved her friend's problem but created a new occupation for herself.

Since then, other people have called upon her services. She goes to the home and if the cats like her (and they always do), she gets the job.

The only unfortunate part of it is: most of her business is during the summer months and that rather cuts into her vacation time.

Fred and Clair Elias of Hazel Park reported in the Detroit Free Press that some cats make their own arrangements about such matters.

They have a black cat who shows up regularly on Friday evenings, stays until Monday morning and then checks out for the next five days. They call him Midnight and say he is an excellent house guest.

The Eliases have decided that his owners go away on weekends leaving Midnight to fend for himself. He does—and really handsomely.

Unfortunately, not all cats are as lucky as he. Even two days can be too long for your cat to be on his own. The SPCA contends that over eighty percent of their calls for investigation stem from neglect rather than cruelty. It is a moot question, however, where neglect and cruelty end and begin. It is even more difficult to get citizens who report cases to the SPCA to testify against the neighbors they call about.

People are funny, aren't they?

Which, coincidentally, brings us to television. And television takes us to Atlanta, Georgia.

Mr. Taylor Lumpkin, producer of WSB-TV's "Today in Georgia" show, heard the Atlanta Humane Society was over-run with kits and cats who were doomed to be put to sleep unless homes were found for them. He offered air time to exhibit these cuties to the great television audience in an all-out to save their lives. Sounded simple, effective and worthwhile. Just box them up, send them over—and the airwaves would convince people they almost needed them.

No one remembered that one hundred kittens are just like one hundred drops of mercury. Try to pick one up and you'll learn the meaning of the word elusive. By the time your hand reaches to where he was, he is ten feet away either washing or looking at you as if you were daft.

Mrs. Edith Hills Coogler of the Atlanta Journal recounted the trials of that hour on the air.

Mr. Lumpkins had thoughtfully designed an attractive pen to confine the kits in front of the camera. Again, no one remembered that kittens like to climb. In fact, at times seem to have wings.

Two members of the Society delivered the kits and they were put into the pen just minutes before air-time. By air-time, there were kittens scaling the draperies, chewing shoe laces, climbing scenery, under chairs, hanging onto announcers' trousers as they valiantly gave commercials. Everything your kittens have done, these grateful waifs were exposing to the world at large.

Staff members, visitors, secretaries—simply everyone in the studio, was pressed into coralling these dolls. Many of them were adopted on the spot. Hours after the show was off the air, little cat voices were heard from desk drawers.

Mr. Lumpkin thanked the organization for their cooperation, but no one mentioned "doing it again real soon."

Don Fedderson, who produces "The Millionaire," a TV show you may have seen, is still going ahead with his plan to do a story featuring a cat. One with convergent strabism. All right—crossed eyes. All Siamese were ruled out. They look too rich to need a million dollars.

The cat most likely to inherit the role, according to the Lima News is Elmer, a Mendon, Ohio, barnyard female. Her three owners learned about the search and contacted Hollywood.

Mr. Fedderson admitted he is interested in Elmer to play the faithful feline "who adopts an old lady and cares for her in her declining years." True to program theme, this old lady is given the million dollars and wills it all to the cat before she dies.

Elmer is a pretty average cat. Her mother still has to catch her mice for Elmer can't see very much except her nose—or salted peanuts of which she is very fond.

Her unusual appearance—a cross-eyed Calico isn't too common—may bring her fame this summer. Do drop her a fan letter should you happen to catch the program—someone will read it to her.

Of cats and films, in the Riverdale, New York, Press, mention is made of the "Private Life Of a Cat," produced by Alexander Hamid. It is a documentary film of the birth and growth of a cat family and the relationship of the father and mother to the new kittens. Sounds like a wonderful project for juvenile education. It was shown at several Riverdale schools—the Dodgewood School and the Spuyten Duyvil Infirmary. Several readers have written asking about such a movie. This one is available from film rental agencies.

from an article by Louise Rucks in the Oklahoma City Oklahoman. She is a dog fancier and admits she doesn't know too much about cats. One of her pups was refused by the dam . . . too small to even be fed with a medicine dropper, it had to be nursed by an animal.

To use Miss Rucks' words, "I took a chance on the cat. Cats, I think, are like people who enjoy something dire that happens to somebody else. It brings out the best in them. It makes them feel and act like the Rock of Gibraltar, and really they are! And so are cats. Many cats are compassionate and sweet and purry when there's illness or trouble and don't care to be bothered in normal times. Our cats hover over sick animals and quite often pick a fight the very day they recover.

"I truly think we were both surprised when that sick wee little thing began to nurse. I had the feeling the cat was saying to me, 'I will do as you ask. But is it wise?'"

"The baby kittens pile on it and keep it warm. Even they seem to know.

"You could set your clock by the mother cat. Every three hours she comes out on the porch and cries and I go in and help feed her pup. It is because the pup is restless—or because I let her drink the milk that's left.

"You tell me. I haven't, as yet, fathomed that far into cat behavior." —J.L.
